

George Washington High School Drama Girls in Three Playlets

ALICE E. BLUMENTHAL

ROSE GOOSAKOFF

AUGUSTUS JACOBS

First of Three Performances
Given To-Night in
P. S. No. 25.

The first of three performances by the George Washington High School Drama Society will be given tonight in the auditorium of Public School No. 32, Academy Street and Vermilyea Avenue. The remaining performances of the annual variety show will be to-morrow and Saturday evenings. A dress rehearsal yesterday afternoon served as a performance to the children of Public School No. 52.

Three one-act plays, two from the "Harvard Workshop," make up the entertainment. The first is "Two Crooks and a Lady" by Eugene Pillot, a "crook-play with a moral." The cast: Miller, the Hawk, Augustus Jacobs; Lucille, Viola Koepke; Mrs. Simms-Vane, Nellie J. Lawson; Miss Jones, Anna Boylan; Police Inspector, George Auerbach; Garrity, Lester Altachul.

"The Florist Show," a comedy by Winifred Hawbridge, is next, with the following cast: Maude, Alice E. Blumenthal; Henry, Milton Schreiber; Slovisky, Lou R. Strauss Jr.; Miss Wells, Marian De Witt; Mr. Jackson, Harrison Cardiff.

The last play is a fantastic thriller, "The Will of the Wisp," by Doris F. Hatman. The cast: The Country Woman, Rose Goosakoff; the Pale-Faced Girl (Will of the Wisp), Sarah Armes; the Post's Wife, Marie Bennett; Her Maid, Eleanor O'Reilly.

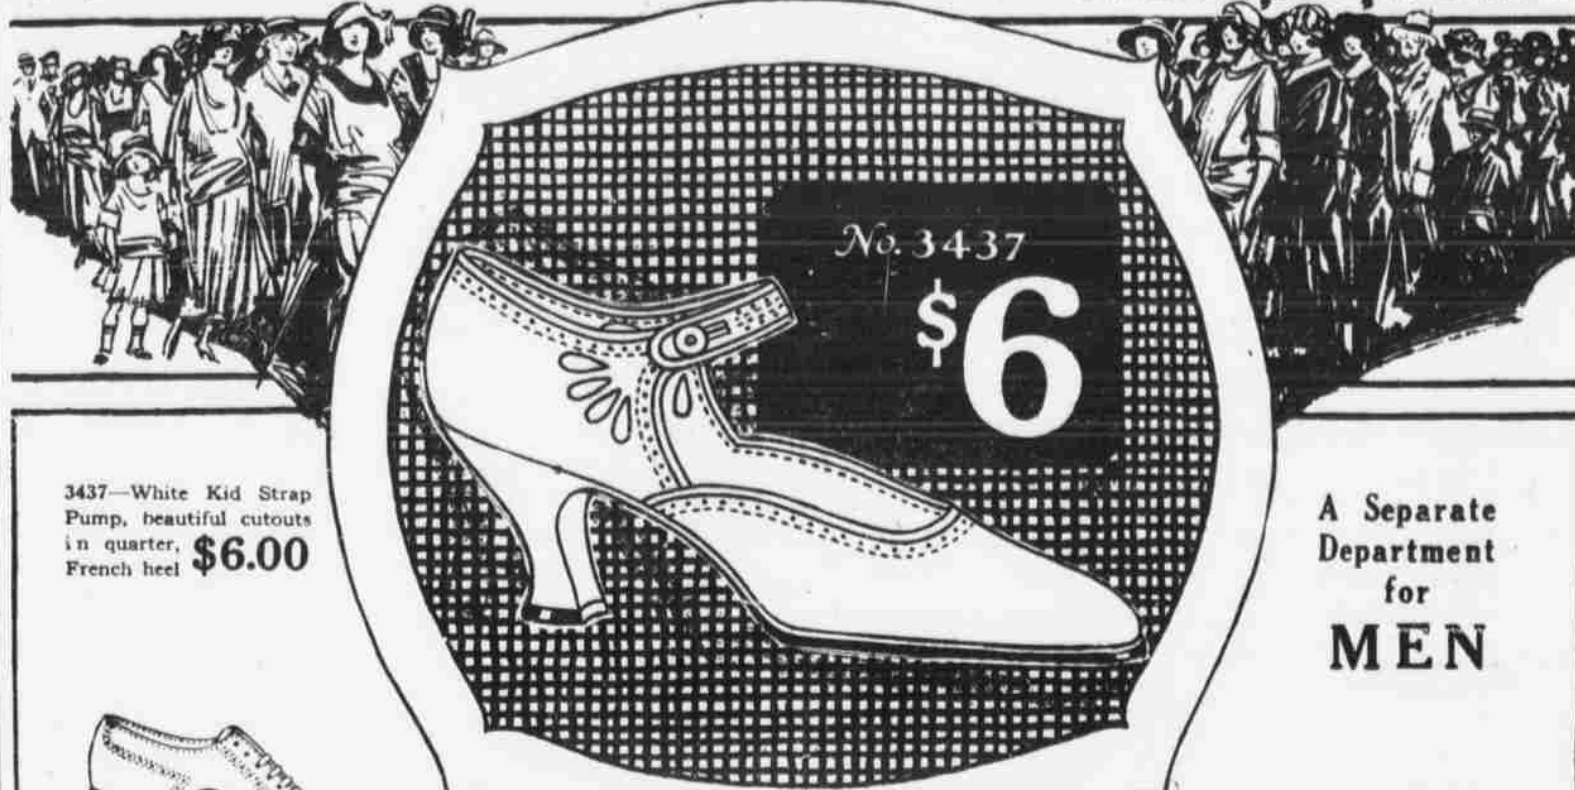

The casts are made up of the best actors in the school, who have been coached during the year by Edwin Van E. Knickerbocker. Sarah Armes, the slight miss who plays the eerie title role in "Will of the Wisp," had the leading part in the school pageant during the winter. Between the play-lets the school orchestra, conducted by Miss Conway, will play, and after the show there will be dancing in the gymnasium.

Others connected with the presentation of the plays are: Prompters, Velma Blakely, Charlotte Levenson, Dwight McLaughlin; accompanists, Sadie Naumann, Blanche Brown, Marjorie Newman; lighting and stage construction, Clinton Campbell, Stephen Ruden, Walter Sandt; stage decorations, Miss Murphy, Alan Goldman, Hector Spear; curtain hanging, Agatha Fredericks, Anna Kortlang.
